GCED Initiative Summary: Online Learning – Fuel Education

Initiative: Online Learning – Fuel Education

Initiative Coordinator: Brian Cashman, bcashman@gced.k12.mn.us, 651-764-9016

Replaces: Does not replace any current initiative

Supports: The GCED Online Learning – Fuel Education initiative supports local school district efforts with personalized learning and 1:1 technology initiatives.

Rationale: This initiative is important because (1) it provides online curriculum and instruction options to GCED-member school districts, (2) it allows for consistency and quality control among GCED-member school districts in regard to online curricula, and (3) it provides support and options for current local school district programming (1:1 initiatives, Online curricula development, Credit Recovery, etc.).

Description: Fuel Education is a suite of products and services designed to help school districts help provide personalized learning to students. Key opportunities offered by Fuel Education include:

- Comprehensive course catalog for secondary students, including Core, Comprehensive, Honors, AP[®], plus Remediation, and Credit Recovery for students who need extra help;
- K-12 prescriptive learning package and LearnBop, which both can be used for intervention and 1:1 initiative efforts;
- Middlebury Interactive Languages, which includes Spanish, French, German, Chinese, and Latin;
- Elementary (K-5) courses.

According to www.getfueled.com, additional features include:

- Matched to state and national standards;
- Includes teacher-led guidance and activities, whether online or onsite, that round out the full experience;
- Ensures student mastery of material through formative and periodic summative online assessment.

How Fuel Education is Being Used:

Fuel Education is currently being used by member districts in different ways: as a credit recovery program, as curriculum and courses in alternative high school settings, as a way of providing enrichment for students, and as a way to expand course offerings at the high school level.
